LIEUT, HAMBEOUGH'S INSURANCE. NEW YORK, 31st Decomber. Lieutenant Hambrough, the young Englishmon who was mysteriously shot dead while fowlng in Scotland with his tutor, Alfred Monson had been insured in the Mutual Life Company of this city on two policies of $50,000 each. This is the highest risk the company socepts. Hambrough had assigned these policies o Monson's wife. It was this circumstance that led to the trial of Monson on suspicion of having killed Hambrough. Hambrough was a minor when he made the assignments, wherefore they are invalid. The question arcse as to whether the policies would have to be paid to Hambrough's heirs. Officials of the company said to-night that evidence has been found of the conceal ment of material facts, which, under the contracts, make the policies void.
